Dear readers,

The Journal of Systems Integration celebrates its second birthday. On this occasion I should like to thank all the authors who published their papers in this journal and also all reviewers who strictly and fairly evaluated their contributions.

Let me also present some statistics to you. Within two years there were 38 papers from 85 authors coming in total from 14 countries all over the world published in the journal. Editorial system we are using, tracking the number of visitors for each paper. We have 22568 visitors up to now and the number of opening of one paper varies from 400 to 4227 in maximum.

The Journal of Systems Integration is in progress of registration with SCOPUS and EBSCO databases and meets all the necessary requirements of application for listing in the Thomson Reuter’s Web of Science database. Our success in obtaining non-zero impact factor will depend on the quality of our publications and the level of citations of the journal. We would like to rely upon your continuing support in submitting quality papers and assisting with the high publication standard corresponding increase in the number of citations.

I suppose you are regular reader of this journal, and hope you will be also our faithful reader in the future. If you are just now the new reader of our journal, I hope you will find its content interesting and useful for your professional and scientific and/or research work.

In current issue you will find a wide variety of interesting topics, which relate to corporate information systems, process management and strategic networking.

We are looking forward to your continuing support in 2012 year.

On behalf of the editorial board of the Journal of Systems Integration I wish you success in your professional endeavors.

Best regards
