Dear visitors, dear readers,

It is my great pleasure to present the first issue of a brand new Journal of Systems Integration, published by the Czech Society of Systems Integration.

Systems integration plays a crucial role in improving the effectiveness and efficiency of information and knowledge systems. Integration involves not only data, software, business applications, and knowledge, but also integrating different perspectives on information systems. The Journal of Systems Integration provides a unified view of IS/ICT specialists, IS/ICT managers, business managers, and users, from both private and government organizations. The Journal of Systems Integration aims to publish contributions dealing with different aspects of IS/ICT from university researchers and practitioners, combining the best research results from different areas of IS/ICT.

Journal of Systems Integration has secured an international group of highly respected scholars from 9 countries, including researchers from leading Czech universities to serve on the journal editorial board, and providing expertise across a range of topics in management of IS/ICT.

I would like to take this opportunity to invite authors to submit manuscripts to the Journal of Systems Integration. All manuscripts submitted will be reviewed by the referees on the basis of their significance and innovation. I very much appreciate your support as we strive for the Journal of Systems Integration to become one of the leading authoritative journals in the field of IS/ICT, and a valuable tool for communication among IS/ICT professionals, academics and research students.
